Water Corporations Review

The Chairman of the Tasmanian Water and Sewerage Corporations Mr Miles Hampton today announced that following a major review of Onstream, which is the shared service provider to the three water corporations, its operations would be significantly restructured.

Where at all possible the functions of Onstream will be fully integrated within Southern Water, Ben Lomond Water and Cradle Mountain Water.

Mr Hampton said the move will improve communications between the corporations, promote more efficient use of resources and enable the corporations to achieve savings of $2.3 million each year.

“In practical terms this will see staff employed at Onstream relocated to the offices of Southern Water, Ben Lomond Water and Cradle Mountain Water,” Mr Hampton said.

All water corporations are firmly committed to shared services however the restructure recognises that with the three water corporations now up and running, the shared services operations can be more efficiently provided on a co-located basis and that some support functions are no longer required.

The reduction in support functions may mean that up to 16 staff members will no longer have a role within the restructured organisation.

“The savings will allow Southern Water, Ben Lomond Water and Cradle Mountain Water to provide improved services to consumers as well as provide increased returns to our Owners,” Mr Hampton said.
